B7-2-positive tumor-infiltrating lymphocytes are associated with increased tumor cell apoptosis in hepatocellular carcinoma. This study analyzes the correlation between the expression of B7-2 molecules on tumor-infiltrating lymphocytes (TILs) and their apoptosis in hepatocellular carcinoma (HCC) and seeks to identify the mechanisms involved. B7-2 molecules are expressed on T lymphocytes, natural killer cells and dendritic cells, with a significantly lower expression on HCC cells than on adjacent nontumor hepatic tissues. Tumor cell apoptosis in HCC was significantly higher in B7-2-positive cases than in B7-2-negative cases. In addition, TILs are present in the tumor microenvironment in 87.5% of HCC cases, and a positive correlation is detected between TILs and tumor cell apoptosis in all cases studied. The expression of B7-2 molecules on TILs, which mediate the stimulation of tumor cell apoptosis through the down-regulation of B7-2 molecules on tumor cells and the activation of cytotoxic T lymphocytes, is correlated with the apoptosis of tumor cells. The up-regulation of B7-2 molecules on TILs may be a potential candidate for the immunotherapy of HCC.
